

DISCOURSE

Discourse 27.2 & 3 (Spring & Fall 2005)

Hostly and Unhostly Mediums

Table of Contents

Technology, Aesthetics and Populism in “The Gospel According to Mark” Brett Levinson . . . . .	3
Sympathy For the Dead: (G)hosts, Hostilities and Mediums in Alejandro Amenábar’s The Others and Postmortem Photography Susan Bruce . . . . .	21
Invitation to Politics: Juan García Ponce and the Promise of Availability David E. Johnson . . . . .	41
Messianic-City: Ruins, Refuge and Hospitality in Derrida Puspa Damai . . . . .	68
Sovereign (In)hospitality: Politics and the Staging of Equality in Revolutionary Mexico Gareth Williams . . . . .	95
Is Nothing Secret? Scott Michaelsen &amp; Scott Cutler Shershow . . . . .	124
Unhostly Historical Discourses in Ariel Dorfman’s Heading South, Looking North: A Bilingual Journey and Albertina Carri’s film The Blonds Valeria Wagner . . . . .	155
Hawthorne, Sacrifice, Sovereignty Tim Deines . . . . .	179
Piercing the Screen of Words: Reflections on the Political Poetics of Douglas Oliver Carol Watts . . . . .	198
What About Schmitt? Translating Carl Schmitt’s Theory of Sovereignty as Literary Concept [Review] Jess Boersma . . . . .	215
Contributors . . . . .	228