

DISCOURSE

Discourse 30.3 (Fall 2008)

Special Issue: Cinema and Accident
Guest Editors: René Thoreau Bruckner,
James Leo Cahill, and Greg Siegel

Contents

Introduction: Cinema and Accident René Thoreau Bruckner, James Leo Cahill, and Greg Siegel . . .	279
How It Feels to Be Run Over: Early Film Accidents James Leo Cahill	289
Doing Death Over: Industrial Safety Films, Accidental Motion Studies, and the Involuntary Crash Test Dummy Karen Beckman	317
The Accident Is Uncontainable/The Accident Must Be Contained: High-Speed Cinematography and the Development of Scientific Crash Testing Greg Siegel	348
Lost Time: Blunt Head Trauma and Accident-Driven Cinema René Thoreau Bruckner	373
The Contingency of Connection: The Path to Politicization in Babel Todd McGowan	401
“This Guitar Has Seconds to Live”: Guitar Drag’s Archaeology of Indeterminacy and Violence Carlos Kase	419
Contagion and the Necessary Accident Bill Albertini	443
Book Review
Making Trouble: Crash Cultures: Modernity, Mediation and the Material , edited by Jane Arthurs and Iain Grant
The Culture of Calamity: Disaster and the Making of Modern America , by Kevin Rozario Daniel Herbert	468
Contributors	472